Forums you should know before you join one With limited budgets and no or very few union establishments, a majority of the workers in the garment industry are contractual workers and not full-time salaried ones like in the restaurant and transport sectors. This creates the risk that workers in one industry will be forced into another industry where there are safety hazards as a result of non-compliance with health and safety legislation. This is of special concern in the garment industry in Bangladesh where it is estimated that some of the factories fail to meet basic health and safety requirements. Tough decisions Migrant workers leave the city after the garment factories had shut down during the disastrous fire in a clothing factory in Dhaka in One in four refugees have been made to leave their home city because of human rights abuses. Some 8 million garment workers are estimated to be making an average monthly wage of about 890. Many of them are paid in cash and work for five, six or even seven days a week. The industry employs about But the industry is perceived to be an easy target for arsonists. Badly managed housing estates have also caused tensions. According to the Bangladeshi government, more than 1. The Confederation of Myanmar Workers, which comprises 26 trade unions, has called on the government to amend laws in a bid to regulate the industry. This remains
